As an instance of the husband's cruelty, McDermott says that one night he came home and found one of the children, who had died during the day, lying on the table. He had refused to summon an undertaker or get an icebox in which to place the body.

He grumbled because his supper was not ready, lifted the body to the other end of the table, prepared his meal and ate it while sitting beside his dead child.

That was what the jury said last evening at the close of one of the most remarkable trials ever held in the great white Court-House. The court-room was still thronged by

of the friendless and unattractive little or the friendless and unattractive little woman who, with her two pretty baby girls about her knees, had asked the Court of Common Pleas to do justice by her in her sad predicament.

The crowd applauded when Foreman Frank Feldhusen stood up in his place in the jury box and announced the verdict after the jury had deliberated an hour and a half.

in the jury box and announced the verification and a half.

Again and again during the progress of the trial the spectators had expressed their feelings by applicating when a hit was made for the plain-faced woman, and had hissed in disapproval when aspersions were cast upon her by the defendant, the father of the husband who had procured a Dakota divorce from her in order that he might marry another, a younger woman, from his own station in life.

Once while the jury was out there came to the ears of the waiting spectators the sounds of applause from the jury-room. The whole atmosphere had been charged with sympathy for Eddie polyck's rejected servant-girl wife and their neglected babes, and a verdict in favor of the woman was a foregone conclusion, but when the remarkably large sum of damages assessed by the jury was announced the crowd went wild with enthusiasm, and Judge Pryor, who would probably have liked to join in, had much difficulty in restoring order.

Men waved their hats in the air and shouted "hurrah!" Women clapped their hands, and everybody tried to shake hands with the victorious woman and her lawyer.

She took it all very quietly. There were tears in her eyes, and she shook with emotion, but she thanked each juror in a modest, hearty way that showed real gratefulness.

Mrs. Bloch and her daughter ran into the kitchen, crying "Fire!" In a few minutes the bedroom was all ablase, and the smoke and fiames drove them out into the hall.

Jacob Bloch was sleeping in a room just off the front parlor. Mrs. Bloch and her daughter tried to swaken him by calling him, but they got no response for awhile.

It was impossible to get into the room where he was asleep, as the bedroom and kitchen were ablaze by this time.

All the tenants in the house had been aroused, and great excitement prevailed. Everybody rushed downstairs into the street, attired only in night-clothes.

The commotion had attracted the attention of Patrolmen Glynn and Barry, of Capt. Pickett's command. They rushed upstairs to the top floor to save young Bloch.

The fire was burning so fiercely, however, that it was impossible to get near in a charge of stealing a $500 diamond ing from Madelon Goodwin, a young ring from Madelon Goodwin, a young Western woman, who claims to be a boarder at 218 West Twenty-fifth street. He pleaded non vult in the Hudson County Court of General Sessions yesterday, and the plea was accepted.

From representations made to the Court it appears that the young woman became infatuated with Penny, and paid almost daily visits to the race track. One day she loaned him her valuable ring. He failed to return it when requested, and afterwards it was learned that the diamond had been pawned.

Several officials of the Guttenburg race track, including, it is alleged, County Clerk McLoughlin, interested themselves in Penny's behalf to save him from imprisonment. The ring was him from imprisonment, returned to the woman yesterday. Judge Hudspeth said that as restitu-pade the sentence of the

The firemen found him lying unconscious on the floor. He had been overcome by smoke, and was burned on the hands and arms.

He was carried downstairs and removed in an ambulance to the Presbyterian Hospital, where he came round all right under treatment. The burns he received are not serious, and it was said at the hospital he would be able to go home some time to-day.

The fire guited the top floor, east side, and the Blochs lost everything they had even their clothing. Neighbors had to provide Mrs. Bloch and her daughter with dresses to wear. They were uninsured. Their loss is about $500.

Considerable water damage was done in the lower part of the house. The furniture of Andrew Ryan and Mrs. Corbett on the fourth floor, was damaged about $100 each, and the building, which is owned by Samuel Wallach, of 33 East Eighty-third street, was injured to the extent of $1,000.
